THIS little work will be of some use to the Boys of the Grammar Schools of Upper Canada, who intend to Matriculate at the Junior Matriculation Examination in the University of Toronto. The text is, with but few alterations, the Eton text. To notes carefully selected from Burmann, Loers, Cookesley, Browne, Bentley and Lemaire, I have added many of my own. The young student will find the best notes on the Heroides in Andrew's Latin Lexicon, Smith's Classical Dictionary, and Schmitz's Latin Grammar, to which his attention is earnestly directed by

LIFE OF OVID.

HIS BIRTH.

PUBLIUS OVIDIUS NASO was born at Sulmo (Sulmone), a town of the Peligni (Abruzzi), ninety miles distant from Rome, on the 20th March, B.C. 43 : the year in which the consuls Hirtius and Pansa fell in the field of Mutina (Modena). His family was of the Equestrian Order.

HIS EDUCATION.

While still young, he, with his brother Lucius, who was exactly a year older than himself, was sent to Rome to receive their education. Lucius was destined for the bar, but died at the early age of twenty. Ovid studied rhetoric under Arellius Fuscus and Porcius Latro, but the indolent boy spent the hours which he should have devoted to jurisprudence in writing love-songs and fugitive pieces of poetry. Ovid's father discouraged the cultivation of his poetical talents, as tending to poverty ; but all in vain. The full though easy flowing current of his genius would find vent in numbers, whenever he tried to write plain prose. Having completed his education at Athens, he travelled with the poet Macer in Asia and Sicily.

HIS CIVIL OFFICES.

When he assumed the toga virilis, it was bordered with a broad purple stripe—the badge of the patrician order ; but, being unambitious and indolent, he never took his seat in the senate. He filled, however, several magisterial and judicial offices, having been made one of the Triumviri Capitaless, and subsequently one of the Decemviri, who presided over the Centumviri—a court for the trial of testamentary and criminal causes.

HIS CONTEMPORARIES.

His rank, fortune, and talents, enabled him to cultivate the acquaintance of the best poets of his day. Macer and Propertius would recite their compositions to him; Ponticus and Bassus were guests at his table. He had heard the lyrics of Horace read by himself. Virgil he had only seen; and the untimely death of Tibullus prevented him from making the acquaintance of that poet. Among the minor poets of the Ovidian age, we may mention Gratius Faliscus, a writer of harsh heroics; Pedo Albinovanus, an epic poet, and the trusty friend of Ovid; M. Manilius, a philosophical poet; and A. Sabinus, who wrote answers to six of the Epistles of the Heroides, none of which are extant.

HIS CHARACTER.

Epicurean in his tastes, and a skeptic, if not a disbeliever in a future state, Ovid lived a life of continual self-indulgence and intrigue. He himself confesses his natural susceptibility and amorous temperament. Popular as a poet, and successful in society, he possessed all the enjoyments which wealth could bestow. He was a universal admirer of, and as universal a favorite with, the female sex, in the voluptuous capital. He married twice in early life, at the desire of his parents, but he speedily divorced each of his wives in succession. From his third wife, whom he sincerely loved, and by whom he had a daughter, Perilla, he was only separated by

HIS EXILE.

After enjoying the friendship of a large circle of distinguished men, and the favour of Augustus himself, in A.D. 9, Ovid was suddenly commanded by an imperial edict to transport himself to Tomi (Tomoswar), a town on the Euxine, near the mouth of the Danube, in the marshy, barren country of the rude and uncivilized Getæ. The sole reason assigned in the edict for his banishment was his having published his poem on the Art of Love. The real cause is suspected to have been some intrigue with one of the members of the imperial family, but the whole affair is involved in obscurity. Whatever may have been the cause, the punishment was a cruel one. Ovid, who, with all his faults, was affectionate and tender-hearted, was torn from all the voluptuous blandishments of the capital, from the sympathies of congenial spirits, who could appreciate his talents, and from the arms of his weeping wife, and was hurried off in the depth of winter, without any preparations for his voyage, to an abode as inhospitable and inclement as that of Scythia. He lived in exile only ten years; constant anxiety preyed upon his bodily health, and, after a lingering illness, he died in the sixtieth year of his age, A.D. 18. The Tomitæ shewed their respect by erecting a tomb to his memory.

HIS WORKS.

All the extant poems of Ovid, with the exception of the Metamorphoses, are elegiac. It was the metre then most in vogue. His principal works are, 1, Amorum Libri III.; 2, Epistolæ Heroidum, twenty-one in number; 3, Ars Amatoria; 4, Remedia Amoris; 5, Metamorphoseon Libri XV.; 6, Fastorum Libri XII.; 7, Tristium Libri V.; 8, Epistolarum Ex Ponto Libri IV. His minor poems consist of the Medea, a lost tragedy; Ibis, a satire; Nux, an elegy; and some fragments on Cosmetics and Fishing.

ON ELEGIAC VERSE.

(From Dr. McCaul's "Course of Classical Study.")

"In the Elegiac distich, Ovid of course must be your model for Latin, as Tyrtæus, Theognis, Euripides, or Callimachus, for Greek. The Latin pentameter is regulated by severe laws. The cæsural division must not be violated by elision, although Catullus might be quoted as authority for the license. The first penthemimer should not terminate with a spondee followed by a monosyllable; nor should a monosyllable close the verse, except with elision. You may regard it as a general rule, that the final word must be dissyllabic. The only exception which can be permitted is in the case of a quadrisyllable. An adverb should rarely appear in the last place; a present participle almost never. The sense, also, must not overflow from one couplet into another; or, if it should, the only termination for it is the end of the second."

SCALES OF THE METRE.

I. The Dactylic Hexameter consists, as its name imports, of six feet; in the first four places, dactyls or spondees may be used at pleasure; the fifth foot is usually a dactyl, the sixth invariably a spondee, as represented in the following scheme:

II. The Dactylic Pentameter is composed of two Dactylic Penthemimers, or, in other words, two Dactylic Trimeters Catalectic joined together. The first two feet may be either dactyls or spondees ; they are followed by a cæsural syllable, then two dactyls, and another cæsural syllable, thus :—

The melody of Ovid's hexameters is in a great measure owing to his careful attention to the Cæsura. He is also very careful in the choice and arrangement of the closing words of each line, which greatly contributes to the smoothness of the rhythm. But it is in the artistic and graceful structure of his pentameters that Ovid far surpasses the Greeks and their imitators, Catullus, Tibullus, and Propertius. With him, the first Cæsura always is the last syllable of a word, and the last word of the line nearly always a dissyllable. We occasionally find est in this latter place, preceded by a dissyllable which suffers elision. Of these we have three instances in these two Epistles : (Ep. I. 20, Ep. XIII. 76 and 112):

This species of verse received the name Elegiac from its having been originally employed in mournful strains. Its province was, however, in process of time, much extended. It was used by the Greeks in hymns, epigrams, and even war songs ; and by the Romans in epigrams, epistles, and all kinds of amatory poetry.

P. OVIDII NASONIS HEROIDUM

EPIST. I.

PENELOPE ULYSSI.

ARGUMENT.

Ulysses, king of Ithaca, was one of the most famous of the Greek chieftains who took part in the expedition against Troy. At the end of the war, he set out on his return home ; but for ten years was driven about to various parts of the Mediterranean Sea. He met with a great variety of adventures, and visited various strange countries. His wife Penelope, in the meanwhile, being filled with anxiety and perplexity, in consequence of hearing no tidings of him, writes him this letter. She begins by entreating him to return, and curses the day on which Paris sailed to Lacedæmon (vv. 1-6). Whilst Troy was standing, she was always fancying her husband would be killed (vv. 11-22): but when Troy was destroyed, all the chieftains returned home, and charmed their wives by stories of the brave deeds of their countrymen. In this way Penelope had heard of the deeds of Ulysses himself: for she had sent her son Telemachus to Pylus, and there he talked with Nestor (vv. 25-45). But what was the use to her of Troy having been taken, if Ulysses did not return home? Nay, it would be better, as far as she was concerned, if Troy were still standing; for at any rate she would know where her husband was (vv. 47-70). She does not know exactly what to fear; but she fears everything. Possibly he may have fallen in love with some other person! (vv. 71-80). Meanwhile, her own father Icarius, taking for granted that Ulysses must be dead, is constantly urging her to marry some one else. The chieftains of the neighbouring islands are all wooing her, and plundering the kingdom of Ulysses (vv. 81-94). Even the beggar Irus and the herdsman Melanthius insult her. She has no one to protect her but Laertes, the aged father, and Telemachus, the youthful son, of Ulysses. Out of reverence for his father, and in order that he may be the defender of his son, Ulysses ought to return (v. 95, ad fin.)

HANC tua Penelope lento tibi mittit, Ulysse :

Nil mihi rescribas ; attamen ipse veni.

Troja jacet certe, Danaïs invisa puellis :

Vix Priamus tanti, totaque Troja, fuit.

5 O utinam tunc, cum Lacedæmona classe petebat,

Obrutus insanis esset adulter aquis !

Non ego deserto jacuissem frigida lecto,

Nec quererer tardos ire relictæ dies :

Nec mihi, quærenti spatiosam fallere noctem,

10 Lassaret viduas pendula tela manus.

Quando ego non timui graviora pericula veris ?

Res est solliciti plena timoris amor.

In te fingebam violentos Troas ituros :

Nomine in Hectoreo pallida semper eram.

15 Sive quis Antilochum narrabat ab Hectore victum,

Antilochus nostri causa timoris erat :

Sive Menœtiaden falsis cecidisse sub armis,
 Flebam successu posse carere dolos.
 Sanguine Tlepolemus Lyciam tepefecerat hastam ;
 20 Tlepolemi leto cura novata mea est.
 Denique, quisquis erat castris jugulatus Achivis,
 Frigidius glacie pectus amantis erat.
 Sed bene consuluit casto deus æquus amori ;
 Versa est in cinerem sospite Troja viro.
 25 Argolici rediere duces ; altaria fumant ;
 Ponitur ad patrios barbara præda deos.
 Grata ferunt nymphæ pro salvis dona maritis ;
 Illi victa suis Troia fata canunt.
 Mirantur justique senes, trepidæque puellæ ;
 30 Narrantis conjux pendet ab ore viri.
 Atque aliquis posita monstrat fera prælia mensa ;
 Pingit et exiguo Pergama tota mero :
 “ Hac ibat Simois ; hic est Sigeia tellus ;
 Hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.
 35 Illic Æacides, illic tendebat Ulysses ;
 Hic lacer admissos terruit Hector equos.”
 Omnia namque tuo senior, te quærere misso,
 Rettulerat nato Nestor ; at ille mihi.
 Rettulit et ferro Rhesumque Dolonæque cæsos ;
 40 Utque sit hic somno proditus, ille dolo.
 Ausus es, o nimium nimiumque oblite tuorum,
 Thracia nocturno tangere castra dolo ;
 Totque simul mactare viros, adjutus ab uno !
 At bene cautus eras, et memor ante mei !
 45 Usque metu micuere sinus ; dum victor amicum
 Dictus es Ismariis isse per agmen equis.

- Sed mihi quid prodest vestris disjecta lacertis
 Ilios ? et, murus quod fuit ante, solum ?
 Si maneo, qualis Troja durante manebam :
 50 Virque mihi, dempto fine carendus, abes ?
 Diruta sunt alijs, uni mihi Pergama restant ;
 Incola captivo quæ bove victor arat.
 Jam seges est, ubi Troja fuit ; reseccandaque falce
 Luxuriat, Phrygio sanguine pinguis, humus.
 55 Semisepulta virûm curvis feriuntur aratris
 Ossa : ruinas occulit herba domos.
 Victor abes ; nec scire mihi, quæ causa morandi,
 Aut in quo lateas ferreus orbe, licet.
 Quisquis ad hæc vertit peregrinam littora puppim,
 60 Ille mihi de te multa rogatus abit.
 Quamque tibi reddat, si te modo viderit usquam,
 Traditur huic digitis charta notata meis.
 Nos Pylon, antiqui Neleï Nestoris arva,
 Misimus : incerta est fama remissa Pylo.
 65 Misimus et Sparten ; Sparte quoque nescia veri,
 Quas habitas terras, aut ubi lentus abes.
 Utilius starent etiam nunc mœnia Phœbi ;
 (Irascor votis heu levis ipsa meis !)
 Scirem, ubi pugnares ; et tantum bella timerem ;
 70 Et mea cum multis juncta querela foret.
 Quid timeam ignoro ; timeo tamen omnia, demens :
 Et patet in curas area lata meas.
 Quæcunque æquor habet, quæcunque pericula tellus,
 Tam longæ causas suspicor esse moræ.

P. OVIDII NASONIS HEROIDUM

EPIST. XIII.

LAODAMIA PROTESILAO.

ARGUMENT.

When the Greeks, under king Agamemnon, had resolved on making their famous expedition against Troy, they collected their forces and ships at Aulis, a town of Bœotia. The winds proving contrary, they were detained there for some time.

There was in the army a Thessalian, named Protesilaus. His wife Laodamia, hearing of the delay, wrote this letter to him; in which she tells him how much bitter grief she had suffered when he left her; how she stood upon the sea-shore, and strained her eyes in endeavouring to follow his ship, as he sailed away; and how, when she could see neither himself nor his vessel, she swooned away (vv. 17-24). She utters bitter reproaches against the wicked Paris, whose beauty was the curse and ruin of his country (v. 43). She cannot avoid giving expression to her feelings of terror: she has heard of Troy, and of one Hector, of whom she especially bids Protesilaus beware (vv. 51-66). Alas! she had good reason to dread Hector, for her husband was afterwards killed by him.

She fears Protesilaus is not destined to return home, for, as he left his home his foot stumbled on the threshold (vv. 81–88). She had been told that whoever was the first to land on the Trojan shore, was doomed to be killed ; and she bids her husband take care that his ship was the last of all the fleet, and that he was the last of his crew to land from it (vv. 89–94). Having terrified herself by her own fancies, she imagines that she sees the ghost of her dead husband. In an agony of grief and dismay, she offers sacrifice to the deities of night (vv. 99–104). She is alarmed by the fact that the Greeks are resolved on leaving their native land, though the winds are contrary (vv. 105–112). And she ends her letter by entreating Protesilaus, if he has any love for her, to take care of himself.

MITTIT, et optat amans quo mittitur ire, salutem, Hæmonis Hæmonio Laodamia viro.

Aulide te fama est, vento retinente, morari—

Ah ! me cum fugeres, hic ubi ventus erat ?

5 Tum freta debuerant vestris obsistere remis ;

Illud erat sævis utile tempus aquis.

Oscula plura viro, mandataque plura dedissem ;

Et sunt quæ volui dicere plura tibi.

Raptus es hinc præceps ; et, qui tua vela vocaret,

10 Quem cuperent nautæ, non ego, ventus erat.

Ventus erat nautis aptus, non aptus amanti.

Solvor ab amplexu, Protesilaë, tuo :

Linguaque mandantis verba imperfecta relinquit ;

Vix illud potui dicere triste, Vale.

15 Incubuit Boreas, abreptaque vela tetendit ;

Jamque meus longe Protesilaüs erat.

Dum potui spectare virum, spectare juvabat ;

Sumque tuos oculos usque secuta meis.

Ut te non poteram, poteram tua vela videre ;

20 Vela diu vultus detinuere meos.

At postquam nec te, nec vela fugacia vidi,

Et quod spectarem, nil nisi pontus erat ;

Lux quoque tecum abiit, tenebrisque exsanguis
obortis

Succiduo dicor procubuisse genu.

25 Vix socer Iphiclus, vix me grandævus Acastus,

Vix mater gelida mœsta refecit aqua.

Officium fecere pium, sed inutile nobis :

Indignor miseræ non licuisse mori.

Ut rediit animus, pariter rediere dolores ;

30 Pectora legitimus casta momordit amor.

Nec mihi pectendos cura est præbere capillos ;

Nec libet aurata corpora veste tegi.

Ut quas pampinea tetigisse Bicorniger hasta

Creditur ; huc illuc, quo furor egit, eo.

35 Conveniunt matres Phylacæides ; et mihi clamant,

Indue regales, Laodamia, sinus.

Scilicet ipsa geram saturatas murice vestes,

Bella sub Iliacis mœnibus ille gerat ?

Ipsa comas pectar ; galea caput ille prematur ?

40 Ipsa novas vestes, dura vir arma ferat ?

Qua possum, squalore tuos imitata labores

Dicar ; et hæc belli tempora tristis agam.

Dyspari Priamide, damno formose tuorum,

Tam sis hostis iners, quam malus hospes eras.

45 Aut te Tænariæ faciem culpâsse maritæ,

Aut illi vellem displicuisse tuam.

- Tu, qui pro rapta nimium, Menelaë, laboras,
Hei mihi ! quam multis flebilis ultor eris !
Dî, precor, a nobis omen removete sinistrum,
50 Et sua det reduci vir meus arma Jovi.
Sed timeo ; quotiesque subit miserabile bellum,
More nivis lacrymæ, sole madentis, eunt.
Ilion et Tenedos Simoïsque et Xanthus et Ide,
Nomina sunt ipso pæne timenda sono.
55 Nec rapere ausurus, nisi se defendere posset,
Hospes erat : vires noverat ille suas.
Venerat (ut fama est) multo spectabilis auro,
Quique suo Phrygias corpore ferret opes.
Classe virisque potens, per quæ fera bella geruntur,
60 Et sequitur regni pars quotacunque sui.
His ego te victam, consors Ledæa gemellis,
Suspisor : hæc Danaïs posse nocere puto.
Hectora nescio quem timeo. Paris Hectora dixit
Ferreæ sanguinea bella movere manu.
65 Hectora, quisquis is est, si sum tibi cara, caveto :
Signatum memori pectore nomen habe.
Hunc ubi vitâris, alios vitare memento ;
Et multos illic Hectoras esse puta.
Et facito dicas, quoties pugnare parabis,
70 Parcere me jussit Laodamia sibi.
Si cadere Argolico fas est sub milite Trojam,
Te quoque non ullum vulnus habente, cadat.
Pugnet, et adversos tendat Menelaüs in hostes ;
Ut rapiat Paridi, quam Paris ante sibi.
75 Irruat ; et causa quem vincit, vincat et armis.
Hostibus e mediis nupta petenda viro est.

- Causa tua est dispar. Tu tantum vivere pugna,
Inque pios dominæ posse redire sinus.
Parcite, Dardanidæ, de tot (precor) hostibus uni,
80 Ne meus ex illo corpore sanguis eat.
Nunc fateor, volui revocare ; animusque ferebat :
Substitit auspicii lingua timore mali.
Cum foribus velles ad Trojam exire paternis,
Pes tuus offenso limine signa dedit.
85 Ut vidi, ingemui : tacitoque in pectore dixi :
Signa reversuri sint, precor, ista viri.
Hæc tibi nunc refero, ne sis animosus in armis :
Fac meus in ventos hic timor omnis eat.
Sors quoque nescio quem fato designat iniquo,
90 Qui primus Danaûm Troada tangat humum.
Infelix, quæ prima virum lugebit ademptum !
Dî faciant, ne tu strenuus esse velis !
Inter mille rates tua sit millesima puppis,
Jamque fatigatas ultima verset aquas.
95 Hoc quoque præmoneo ; de nave novissimus exi.
Non est, quo propères, terra paterna tibi.
Cum venies, remoque move veloque carinam :
Inque tuo celerem littore siste gradum.
Sed tua cur nobis pallens occurrit imago ?
100 Cur venit a verbis multa querela tuis ?
Excutor somno ; simulacraque noctis adoro :
Nulla caret fumo Thessalis ara meo.
Thura damus, lacrymamque super ; qua sparsa re-
lucet,
Ut solet adfuso surgere flamma mero. ↓
105 Hoc quoque, quod venti prohibent exire carinas,

Me movet ; invitis ire paratis aquis.

Quis velit in patriam, vento prohibente, reverti ?

A patria pelago vela vetante datis.

Ipse suam non præbet iter Neptunus ad urbem :

110 Quo ruitis ? Vestras quisque redite domos.

Quo ruitis, Danaï ? Ventos audite vetantes :

Non subiti casus, numinis ista mora est.

Quid petitur tanto, nisi turpis adultera, bello ?

Dum licet, Inachiæ, vertite vela, rates.

115 Sed quid ego revoco hæc ? Omen revocantis abesto ;

Blandaue compositas aura secundet aquas !

Ultima mandato claudetur epistola parvo !

“ Si tibi cura mei, sit tibi cura tui.”

NOTES.

EPIST. I.

Heroides.—Ovid calls these Epistles by this name because they are for the most part written by heroines : “ Heroinæ ”—the consorts of heroes.

The twenty-one Epistolæ Heroidum are a series of love-letters. Their characteristic feature is passion ; the ardour of which is sometimes interfered with by too laboured conceits and excessive refinement. They are, in fact, the most polished efforts of one whose natural indolence often disinclined him from expending that time and pains on the work of amending and correcting which distinguished Virgil. Their great merit consists in the remarkable neatness with which the sentiments are expressed, and the sweetness of the versification ; their great defect is want of variety. The subject necessarily limited the topics. The range of them is confined to laments for the absence of the beloved object, the pangs of jealousy, apprehensions of inconstancy, expressions of warm affection, and descriptions of the joys and sorrows of love.

Penelope was the daughter of Icarius and Peribœa of Sparta, and wife of Ulysses, by whom she had an only child, Telemachus, who was an infant when her husband sailed against Troy. During the long absence of Ulysses, she was beleaguered by numerous and importunate suitors, whom she deceived by declaring that she must finish a large robe for Laertes, her father-in-law, before she could make up her mind. During the day time, accordingly, she worked at the robe, and in the night undid the work of the day. By this means she succeeded in putting off the suitors. But her stratagem was at last betrayed by the servants; and when, in consequence, the faithful Penelope was pressed more and more by the impatient suitors, Ulysses at length arrived in Ithaca, after an absence of twenty years. Having recognized her husband by several signs, she heartily welcomed him, and the days of her grief and sorrow were at an end.

Ulyssi.—Ulysses, the son of Laertes (some say Sisypheus) and Anticlea, was early in life distinguished for courage, for knowledge of navigation, for eloquence, and for skill as a negotiator. It was with great difficulty he was prevailed upon to join the Greeks in their expedition against Troy. When Palamedes came on behalf of the confederates to invoke his aid, he pretended to be mad, and, having yoked an ass and an ox to a plough, began to sow salt. Palamedes, to try him, placed the infant Telemachus before the plough, whereupon the trick was discovered. Ulysses joined the Grecian fleet at Aulis with twelve ships, and during the siege of Troy distinguished himself as a valiant warrior, but more particularly as a cunning spy, and prudent negotiator. But the most celebrated part of his story consists of his adventures after the destruction of Troy, which form the subject of the Homeric poem called after him, the Odyssey. For a full account of these adventures consult Smith's Classical Dictionary. Returning alone to Ithaca, he was kindly received by the faithful swine-herd Eumæus, and accompanied him and Telemachus to the town where the suitors were on the following day to contend with Ulysses' bow for the prize of Penelope's hand. As none of the suitors was able to draw this bow, Ulysses took it up, began to attack the suitors, and with the aid of his son and Eumæus, slew them all except Medon. Penelope, overjoyed, recognises in the victorious stranger her long-lost Ulysses.

1. Hanc, sc. epistolam.—An ellipse frequent in English, e. g., "I write this [sc. letter] in haste," &c., but only occurs once in the Heroides. Epistolam is an awkward word to get into an hexameter line. describo (γράφω)

Lento.—This word has not merely the force of βραδυνόστροφ: "so dilatory" in returning home, but also conveys a fond reproach that want of affection for her is the cause of his tardiness.

2. Though the meaning of this line is obvious, ("Don't answer me, but just come yourself") the true reading is a matter of great doubt. The common reading,—

"Nil mihi rescribas ut tamen: ipse veni" is a solecism, for ut tamen ought not to be after, but before, mihi rescribas. Attamen, "yet however," as Cookesley justly observes, cannot be the right word. Some read, Ah! tamen. Bentley conjectures tu tamen. Distinguish vēni and vēni.

3. Troja jacet certe.—"Troy, we are assured, lies low in the dust;" that cannot be what detains you. Observe the force of certe. clasis (orig. a division perhaps Κλῆσις ^α _{τῆς})

Danais invisa puellis.—"Hateful to Grecian wives," on account of the long absence of their husbands at the siege of Troy. The Greeks were called Danai, from Danaus, son of Belus, and brother of Ægyptus, who wandered out of Egypt into Greece, and there founded Argos. Latham thinks that the Eponymus of the Argive Danai was the Israelite tribe of Dan; an assertion which derives some weight from the fact of Dan's "dwelling in ships," and Isaiah's declaration that the sons and daughters of Judah were sold into captivity beyond the sea.

pendo (pendo alium pondus)

4. Priamus, the famous king of Troy at the time of the Trojan war, was the son of Laomedon and Strymo. His original name is said to have been Podarces "the swift-footed," which was changed into Priamus [Πρίαμος] "the ransomed" (from πρίμαι) because he was ransomed by his sister, Hesione, after he had fallen into the hands of Hercules. His first wife was Arisbe; he afterwards married Hecuba by whom he had the following children: Hector, Alexander, or Paris, Deiphobus, Helenus, Polydorus, Troilus, Creüsa, Cassandra, and many others. He was killed in extreme old age, by Pyrrhus, in the storming of Troy by the Greeks.

Tanti.—"Worth so much" bloodshed and misery.

Troja.—Troy received many names from its different kings. It was called Troja from Tros, son of Ericthonius, and grandson of Dardanus; Teucria from Teucer; Dardania from Dardanus; Ilium or Ilion from Ilus. Troy comprised all that district to the north-west of Mysia, in Asia Minor, bounded on the west by the Ægean Sea, on the north by the Hellespont, on the east by the mountains which border on the valley of the Rhodius, and on the south by the Gulf of Adramyttium. The territory of Troy, properly called the Troad, is for the most part mountainous, being intersected by Mount Ida and its branches; the largest plain is that in which the city of Troy stood. The chief rivers were the Satnois on the south, the Rhodius on the North, and the Simois and Scamander in the centre. These two rivers, so renowned in the legends of the Trojan war, flow from two different points in the chain of Mount Ida, and unite in the plain of Troy, through which the united stream flows north-west, and falls into the Hellespont east of the promontory of Sigeum.

5. O utinam, etc., cf. Hor. Odes, I. 15.

Lacedæmōnā, acc. Gr. from Lacedæmon,—ōnis; other form, Lacedæmonem. Sparta, the most famous city of Peloponnesus, and the capital of Menelaus, was so called from Lacedæmon, son of Jupiter and Tāygete. It was while staying here as the guest of Menelaus, that Paris became enamoured of Helen.

6. Obrutus insanis aquis, "whelmed in the raging waves."

Esset.—The subjunctive after utinam.

Adulter, "Paris."—Derived from ad and alteram.

7. Non ego, etc.—"I would not, in that event, have had to lie shivering," &c.

Frigida (rigeo).—Cf. φρίσσω, ριγέω.

8. Relicta, "deserted" by you.

9. Spatiosam fallere noctem, "to beguile the wearisome night." So decipere noctem. Fallo akin to Gr. σφάλλω.

10. Viduas manus by synecdoche for Penelopen viduam.

Vidua, "widowed," is from the same root vid, which we have in di-vido, divide.

Tela, "the web," prob. contr. from texēla, from texo, "I weave." The ancient looms were perpendicular, not horizontal; hence pendula tela.

11. Pericula [per, ire]. Veris, sc. periculis, "than the reality;" lit., the true dangers.

12. Solliciti, der. fr. obs. Sollus = totus, and cio.

13. Fingebam, "I fancied." In te ituros, "would attack you."

Troas, acc. pl. Gr. from Tros: a Trojan.

14. "I always turned pale at the mention of the name of Hector."

marro (marro gnarus, ^{shuffled} γγγνωσκω)

15. Antilochum.—Antilochus was slain by the Ethiopian Memnon, son of Aurora, not by Hector. Cf. Hom. Od. IV. 187. Wherefore some scholars read Anchialum, others Amphimachum. Antilochus, son of Nestor and Eurydice, accompanied his father to Troy, and distinguished himself by his bravery. He was buried by the side of his friends Achilles and Patroclus.

Hectore.—Hector, the chief hero of the Trojans in their war with the Greeks, was the eldest son of Priam and Hecuba, the husband of Andromache, and father of Scamandrius. He fought with the bravest of the Greeks, and at length slew Patroclus, the friend of Achilles. The death of his friend roused Achilles to the fight. The other Trojans fled before him into the city. Hector alone remained without the walls, though his parents implored him to return; but when he saw Achilles, his heart failed him and he took to flight. Thrice did he race round the city, pursued by the swift-footed Achilles, and then fell pierced by Achilles' spear. The victor tied Hector's body to his chariot, and thus dragged him into the camp of the Greeks; so Homer relates, but later traditions have it that he first dragged the body thrice around the walls of Ilium.

16. Causa timoris, "the object of our anxious fear."

17. Menætiaden.—Patronymic term for Patroclus, son of Menætius, and the intimate friend of Achilles. He fought bravely against the Trojans, until Achilles, after his quarrel with Agamemnon, withdrew from the scene of action, when Patroclus followed his example. But when the Greeks were hard pressed, he begged Achilles to allow him to put on his armour, and with his men to assist the Greeks. Achilles granted his request, and Patroclus, entering the lists falsis sub armis, "clad in armour not his own," after performing prodigies of valour, was at length slain by Hector. To avenge his death, Achilles again took the field.

Falsis.—Adj. der. from fallere, "that deceived" the foe.

18. Penelope wept to think that stratagem might some time fail even the δολόμητις Ὀδυσσεύς.

19. Tlepolemus, a Rhodian chieftain, son of Hercules and Astyoche, was slain at Troy by Sarpedon, king of Lycia. Hence Lycia hasta. Lycia, a province of Asia Minor, lies on the Mediterranean Sea, between Pamphylia and Caria.

Tepefecerat [tepeo-facio].—The construction here changes. Si quis narrabat is dropped and si only retained, but unexpressed. Instead of "If any one had told me that Tlepolemus had, &c.," render "Had Tlepolemus [= if Tlepolemus had] warmed with his blood a Lycian spear; my anxiety, &c."

21. Achivis [Ἀχαιῶι].—"Grecian," from Achaia; as also Argolici, v. 25, "Grecian," from Argolis. Achaia and Argolis were both prominent Peloponnesian states.

22. Frigidius glacie.—See note v. 7. Cf. Ovid Metam. IX. 582,—"pavet glaciali frigore pectus." Fast. I. 98. glacis (v. 98)

"Et gelidum subito frigore pectus erat."

Amantis, "of your loving wife."

23. Bene consuluit, "benignly regarded." Deus. Hymenæus, aut aliquis alius. Amori, dat. commodi.

24. In cinerem.—Loers reads in cineres; but VII. MSS. have cinerem. See also Ovid, Metam. II. 216, "In cinerem vertunt." cinis (Κοινὸς ashes)

Sospite viro, "and my husband safe." Abl. absolute.

Sospes, akin to σῶς. Vir. = ἀνὴρ.

25. Argolici = Argivi [Ἀργεῖοι].—See note, v. 21. Redire duces, i.e., Agamemnon, Menelaus, and Nestor. Their return makes Penelope all the more solicitous about the fate of her husband, who, though Troy had fallen years ago, had not yet returned to Ithaca.

Altaria fumant, "the altars smoke," i.e., with incense and victims. Altaria [fr. altus] primarily meant that which is placed high upon the altar (ara) for the burning of the victim. Hence, poet. (as pars pro toto) a high altar, built and ornamented with more splendour than the ara.

26. Barbara, "foreign," i.e., Trojan. The Greeks called all nations without the Hellenic pale βάρβαροι. The name is probably derived from the Berbers, a tribe of Africa: the people of modern Barbary. Some assert the word to be of Phœnician or Jewish origin—Bar, "son of," (as, Bar-Jonas, Bar-Timæus), frequently entering into their nomenclature, like the Scottish Mac, German Fitz; so that the Greeks called them all βάρβαροι.

Præda [akin to præs, Eng. prize] "spoil." Arms and spoil taken from the enemy were consecrated to the Gods, and hung up in the temples.

27. Nymphæ [Νύμφαι] = nuptæ, "wives." Nympha means either an inferior goddess, a nymph; or a married—never an unmarried—woman. Nymphæ here, doubtless, means the wives of Grecian notables.

Dona = ἀναθήματα, "offerings to the gods."

28. Illi (i.e., mariti ipsi) canunt. Their husbands relate in glowing terms how the fates of Troy were overcome by their own. Cookesley badly connects canunt with hymns of thanksgiving. These would be left to the Rhapsodists by the scarred veterans of the Trojan campaign. Canunt here is elegantly used for narrant. Cf. v. 30.

Fata, pl. of fatum, fr. fari, "the divine decrees." These fata of the Trojans, retaining which they could not be conquered, were—1. The life of Troilus, son of Priam; Achilles slew him. 2. The conservation of the Palladium, or image of Pallas; Ulysses and Diomedes entered the city by night, and, having slain the garrison of the citadel, carried it off. 3. The horses of Rhesus, if they were not taken before that “Pabula gustassent Trojæ Xanthumque bibissent.”—Virg.

They were stolen by Ulysses and Diomedes. 4. The tomb of Laomedon, at the Scaean gate; this was violated by the Trojans themselves when they pulled down the gate to admit the wooden horse. Thus were the Troica fata overcome suis (fatis). Cf. Virg. Æn. VII. 293,— ———— “fatis contraria nostris Fata Phrygum.”

29. Mirantur governs ea [quæ referuntur] understood.

Iusti senes in contradistinction to trepidæ puellæ; “discriminating old men,” who therefore only admire those things which appear to be true and worthy admiration, and “timid maidens,” whose credulous, unsophisticated natures lead them to admire everything.

30. Conjux, from con and jugum: the idea of yoking or coupling. Compare Gr. σύζυγος [σὺν and ζυγόν] and δάμαρ [δάμην = domare, to tame], and St. Paul: “Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers.”

Pendet ab ore, “hangs upon the lips.” So Virgil says of Dido, Æn. IV. 79:

———— “pendetque iterum narrantis ab ore.”

31. Aliquis, “many a one.” Posita, “placed before him.” Monstrat, “describes.”

The Greeks after supper poured out some unmixed wine on στο (ἵστυρι)

Pingo ēre pinxi punctum

the table as a libation to the "good spirit" (ἀγαθοῦ δαίμονος). To this custom Penelope here alludes. So Tibul. I. Eleg. XI. 31:

"Ut mihi potanti possit sua dicere facta,
Miles, et in mensa pingere castra mero."

32. Pingit, etc., "And maps out all Troy in a few wine-drops."

Pergŭmă,—ōrum [Πέργαμα: akin to πύργος, a tower]. The citadel of Troy, poet. for Troy itself.

Mero, "unmixed wine;" vinum, wine in general.

33. Simois,—entis, a small river of Troas, which falls into the Scamander, now Mendes. See note, v. 4.

Sīgēiă, poet. for Trojana. Sigēum was a promontory in Troas, where Achilles was buried, now Cape Janissary.

34. Priami senīs.—Homer, and after him, Virgil, represent Priam as old and full of years. Celsa, a part. fr. an obs. verb cello [Th. κέλλω]. εἰς πῖος (ἐπὶ πῖος)

35. Æacides, "Achilles," the grandson of Æacus.

Tendebat, [Th. τείνω,] "spread his tent." Cf. Virg. XI. 29:

"Hic Dolopum manus, hic sævus tendebat Achilles."

(5ω) 36. Lacer Hector, "The mangled (corpse of) Hector." Homer (II. XXII. 369–371) says that after Achilles killed Hector, the Greeks crowded round to gaze on the dead body of the distinguished warrior, and that no one beheld it without inflicting a wound. No wonder that his bleeding corpse, so lacerated, terrified the horses (admissos) "as they ran at full speed."

37. Misso.—This is a piece of dissimulation on Penelope's part. She did not send Telemachus. He went at Minerva's suggestion, without his mother's knowledge. Homer, Od. II. Quærere, by an elegant Græcism for ut quæreret.

38. Nestor, here called Senior. Homer represents him as having lived three generations. So Horace, Odes, II. 9, 14, calls him "ter ævo functus senex," and Attius, "Trisæclisenex." He was king of Pylos, and father of Antilochus, renowned for his wisdom, his eloquence, his justice, and his knowledge of war.

39. Rhesum.—Rhesus, the son of Eioneus, king of Thrace. He came to the assistance of Troy with his steeds, white as the snow and fleet as the wind. If these should once drink the waters of the Xanthus, and feed upon the grass of the Trojan plain, an oracle had declared that Troy should never fall. But as soon as Rhesus had reached the Trojan territory, and, wearied with the march, had pitched his camp (Thracia castra, v. 42), late at night, Ulysses and Diomedes, informed of these facts by Dolon, a Trojan spy, whom they had intercepted in a night adventure, penetrated into his camp, slew Rhesus himself (proditum somno) "betrayed by sleep," and carried off his horses.

Dolona [Δόλωνα] acc. Gr. of Dolon,—onis. He was slain by Diomedes.

40. Hic, i.e., Rhesus, used here for alter; Hic usually refers to the nearest.

Dolo, a very disagreeable homœoteleuton with the following pentameter. Bentley reads metu; others, vigil and loco. It appears to be a petty paronomasia on Dolon's name, or else an oversight of Ovid. Impunity was promised Dolon by Ulysses and Diomedes if he would reveal what was passing in the Trojan camp. Having received the required information about Rhesus and his horses, they treacherously slew him: a contemptible dolus, scarcely justified by the sentiment, "All's fair in war."

41. Tuorum, i.e., of me and Telemachus; gov. by oblite. Recordor, memini, obliviscor, &c., gov. the genitive.

42. Thracia castra. See note v. 39. Tangere, "to attack." Another reading is frangere, "to break up"

43. Tot viros.—Rhesus and his twelve comrades. Uno, i.e., Diomedes.

44. At bene, etc.—Affectionate irony. Ante = antea, adv.

45. Usque metu micuere sinus.—"My bosom kept trembling with constant fear." Micuere, fr. micare. "Swift motion," and its usual consequences in the sun's rays, "glittering light," are sometimes convertible terms in Latin and Greek. Compare ἀργός, αἰόλος.

Dum = donec. Amicum per agmen, "through the friendly lines" [of the Greeks].

46. Dictus es, i.e., a Telemacho. Penelope is repeating here from Ausus es, v. 41, to equis, v. 46, a thrilling episode of the story told her by Telemachus on his return from his visit to the Pylian Nestor.

Ismariis = Thraciis.—Ismarus was a mountain and city of Thrace, celebrated for its wines.

47. Mihi, dat. com after prodest. Vestris lacertis, "by the strong arms of you Greeks." Lacertus is the muscular part of the arm, from the elbow to the shoulder; brachium, the arm from the elbow to the hand. Vester is never used for tuus. Bentley reads Graiis for vestris.

48. Ἴλιος, fem. "Troy." So called from Ilus, son of Tros. Another form is Ilium, or Ilion, neut.

Solum, [Eng. soil] "level ground," nom. to prodest.

49. Troja durante, abl. abs. "While Troy was holding out."

50. Dempto fine carendus, "to be regretted" (i.e., to be absent) "for ever;" literally, "all end being taken away."

57. Aliis, "for others," dat. com. Uni mihi—reslant, "survives for me alone." Penelope means that, whereas her husband had not returned to her, although Troy had been destroyed, it might as well have been standing as far as she was concerned.

52. Incola victor.—A line of vigorous poetry: "which the victorious colonist ploughs with his captive steer." Incola, Th. in and colo. Captivo [capio] i.e., taken from the Trojans.

53. Seges, "corn-land."

54. Luxuriat, "produces abundant crops."

Phrygio, "Trojan." Troy was situated in Phrygia Minor.

Pinguis, [πίων, fat.] "rendered fruitful."

55. Aratris, fr. aratrum, Gr. ἀροτρον.

56. Herba, [akin to φέρβω, to pasture] "the grass." curr
(yup)

57. Victor, Th. vin-co, Eng. win. Quæ (sit tibi) causa.

58. Quo—orbe, "in what part of the world, iron-hearted one, you may be lurking." Lateas.—Jealousy lurks in this word. Res are etc

59. Peregrinam, "foreign," fr. per and agros. Hæc littora, i.e., of Ithaca. Puppim [Eng. poop.] "the stern;" because sailors in ancient times on coming into port turned the stern toward the shore. Cf. Virgil, "stant littore puppes."

60. Mihi = a me. Multa rogatus, "After having been asked many questions."

61. Tibi reddat, "may hand to thee." Distinguish usquam and unquam.

62. Digilis charta notata meis, "a letter written with my own hands." This is a poetic anachronism. It is scarcely probable that writing materials were known at the assigned date of the Trojan war, B.C. 1184.

63. Pylon, acc. Gr. of Pylos. There were three cities of this name in Peloponessus; in Elis, in Messenia, and in Triphylia. The latter was the Pylos founded by Neleus, and governed by his son Nestor; hence called "Nēlēŷā arva."

64. Misimus.—Consult note, v. 37. Incerta fama, "no certain tidings."

Pater (perhaps lando)

65. Sparten, Gr. acc. here elegantly put for Menelaum, king of Argos, whom Telemachus also visited, but could get no satisfactory intelligence of his father. See note post. v. 98.

66. Lentus.—See note v. 1.

67. Mænia Phæbi.—Poetic pleonasm for Troja. Apollo and Neptune having displeased Jove, were doomed to serve Laomedon, king of Troy, for wages. They accordingly built the walls of Troy. Laomedon refusing to pay the stipulated hire, Neptune sent a sea-monster to whom, from time to time, a maiden, chosen by lot, had to be sacrificed. On one occasion, the lot falling on Hesione, daughter of Laomedon, Hercules promised to rescue her if Laomedon would give him the horses which Tros had received from Jove, as a compensation for Ganymedes. Laomedon promised, but again broke his word when Hercules had killed the monster and saved Hesione. Hercules, thereupon, slew Laomedon with all his sons, except Podarces (Priam), whom Hesione ransomed with her veil, hence called Priamus (fr. πρίαμι). Apollo, in Ov. Heroid. v. 135, is also called "Trojæ Munitor."

68. Votis meis, dat. "with my wishes." Levis, "thoughtless."

69. Tantum, adv. "only." Jealousy again.

70. Cum multis [querelis] = cum multarum querelis. Penelope complains that she is "Denied, though sought with tears, the sad relief

Which misery loves, the fellowship of grief."

71. Quid timeam, "what I am to fear." Ignoro, from in, neg., and gnoro [gnarus] "I know." The old form gn is represented in English by kn; as, gnod-us, a knōt, gnav-us, a knave. Demens [de, mens] "in my madness."

72. "And a wide field is open for my anxieties."

73. Suspikor, fr. sub and spicere, "to look up from below;" hence, to suspect. Cf. Gr. ὑπόδρα, fr. ὑπὸ and δέρκομαι.

meditor (μᾶλ' ἐταῶν)

75. Quæ vestra libido est, "such is the capriciousness of you men." Vester. See note on v. 47.

76. Potes esse captus, "you may be ensnared."

77. Quam rustica sit tibi conjux, "How countrified a wife you've got." Lama (Λαμὰς)

78. "Who only does not allow wool to be unused," i.e. "only knows enough to spin."

79. Fallar.—Supply utinam. "That I may be in error, and that this suspicion," &c. Crimen, lit. a charge [κρίνω.]

80. "And may you not choose to be absent, though you have the power to return!" i.e., I trust your absence is not caused by your own will.

81. Viduo discedere lecto, i.e., to marry some one else.

82. Cogit [co-ago] "urges." Immensas, Th. in and metior.

83. Increpet usque, "constantly inveighs against."

85. Pietate, &c., "by my dutiful affection and chaste entreaties." Pudicis, i.e., pudicæ uxoris.

86. Frangitur = flectitur. Vires temperat, "does not exercise to the full his paternal authority."

87. A line evidently taken from Homer's Odyssey, IX. 24:

Δουλίχιόν τε Σάμη τε καὶ ὕληεσσα Ζάκυνθος.

Same (now Cephalenia), Zacynthos (now Zante), are islands in the Ionian sea, near Ithaca (now Teaki). Dulichium is also named by other poets besides Homer, as an island in the same sea; but it is not known what island is meant. It is supposed to have been one of the group called the Echinades.

Tulit = protulit.

88. Turba luxuriosa, "a wanton crowd," in apposition to proci, "suitors." Penelope might well style them "a wanton crowd," "an unruly crew," for, according to Hom. Od. XVI. 247, she had fifty-two suitors from Dulichium, twenty-four from Samos, twenty from Zacynthos, and twelve from Ithaca.

They acted very imperiously and wasted Ulysses' substance in riotous living. Proci [Gr. μνηστῆρες] from an old verb procure (akin to precari) = poscere in matrimonium

89. This and the following line are highly calculated to incense Ulysses and bring him home.

90. Viscera, "means of living," in apposition to opes, "property." Virescentes

Nostra, i.e., of Laertes, Telemachus and me.

Dilaniantur.—Another reading is dilacerantur.

91. Penelope now gives a list of the suitors who courted and plundered her in a chivalrous, off-hand kind of a way, at one and the same time; but, strange to say, Ovid not only places Medon among the number, but adds the epithet dirum, whereas Homer represents him as an excellent person and (Od. XXII. 357), a great friend of Telemachus, on which account he was spared by his father Ulysses, when the rest of the suitors were slain. Bentley tries to get over the difficulty by reading dium, which badly suits the context. This makes the third remarkable discrepancy between Homer and Ovid which I have noticed in this Epistle. The other two are in vv. 15 and 37. Pisander son of Polytor

92. Icarius, Penelope's father, wished her to marry Eurymachus. Avidas Antinoique manus. Poetic pleonasm for Avidumque Antinoun.

93. Turpiter—alis, "you nourish to your disgrace;" better than turpiter absens, "basely absent." harioire peperit paritum part

94. Rebus—partis, "wealth purchased." Distinguish partis and partis. Sanguine.—Wealth, in the Heroic Age, was considered at least as honorably acquired by predatory warfare, as by tilling the ground or by herding the flock.

95. Irus, an insolent beggar in the house of Ulysses, at Ithaca. His real name was Arnaus but was changed to Irus because he was the messenger of the suitors pars (from *Πορσ whence πείρω was assigned to one's lot)

Melanthius was the goat-herd of Ulysses, by whom he was put to death for his dishonesty, insolence, and treachery.

Pecoris, fr. pecus, "sheep," whence pecunia, money, the product of the sale of wool. Actor, ab agendo, Th. agere. Edendi, "to be eaten," by the suitors, from ed-o, Eng. eat; d and t being interchangeable.

96. Ultimus pudor, (nominativus pendens) "a crowning disgrace," when even a beggar and a goat-herd dare insolently squander your property.

97. Tres—imbelles, ["only] three, and ill fitted to contend with them;" (in neg. and bellum).

98. Laertes, king of Ithaca, son of Acrisius and Chalcomedusa, and father of Ulysses by Anticlea. Some writers call Ulysses the son of Sisyphus. Laertes was still alive when his long-lost son returned to Ithaca.

Senex.—So Hom. Od. XXIV. 233, γῆραι τεϊρόμενος.

Telemachus, son of Ulysses and Penelope. He was still an infant when his father went to Troy; and when the latter had been absent from home nearly twenty years, Telemachus went to Pylos and Sparta to gather information respecting him. He was hospitably received by the Pylian Nestor, as also by Menelaus, at Sparta, who told him the prophecy of Proteus concerning Ulysses. To excite Ulysses' pity, Penelope calls Telemachus, already in his twentieth year, puer. Similarly, v. 115, she styles herself puellam.

99. Insidias (in, sedeo). The suitors lay in wait for Telemachus, hoping to intercept him on his return home from Pylos. Nuper, [noviper fr. novus] "not long ago."

100. Invitis omnibus.—This seems irreconcilable with the statement in v. 63, that Penelope sent Telemachus. Bentley conjectures ignaris, which leaves the difficulty nearly as great as before, but which corresponds more closely with the Homeric version of the story. See note v. 37. All were ignorant except the old nurse, Euryclea.

101. Ordine, "in their natural order." She prays that the Fates may take the oldest first.

102. Comprimat, [con, premo] "may close in death." The closing the eyes of the deceased by the hands of friends appears to have been a very ancient custom. Homer mentions it in Od. XI. 426, and Euripides in the Hecuba.

103. Hoc faciunt, i.e., precantur, "have the same wish—offer the same prayer." Facere often usurps the sense of the leading verb, which precedes it.

Custos boum, Philæti^{us}. Nutrix, Euryclea.

104. Tertius, i.e., Eumæus, the faithful swineherd, who assisted Ulysses and Telemachus in slaying the suitors. Cura fidelis.—Metonymy for qui fideliter curat. cura (quarto)

105. Ut qui sit, "inasmuch as he is." Armis.—Another reading is annis, "by reason of his age;" but the expression inutilis armis is very frequent in Ovid. Cf. Fasti, II. 238, III. 173, V. 81. And besides, the mention of hostibus would point to armis as the true reading.

106. Hostibus, i.e., procis.

107. Vivat modo.—Understand si.

108. Illa, sc. ætas, "For the present that (tender age) ought to be protected by the aid of his father." Auxilium, when used in the plural number, generally signifies "auxiliary troops."

109. Inimicos, personal enemies of Penelope's; hostes, as to Laertes, v. 106. Distinguish inimicus and hostis. By the nice use of these expressions, Penelope seeks to commend her faithful love to Ulysses. Pellere = ad pellendos.

110. Ara, "an altar of refuge." Portus et aura is an elegant reading, both tropes being taken from Ulysses' sea-faring life: a safe port and a favouring breeze—the two delights of a mariner.

111. Mollibus annis, “tender years;” when the mind is easily moulded. Mollis, qu. movilis, fr. moveo. annus (ἐνιαυτός)

112. Erudiendus [e and rudis] “Ought to have been instructed in his father’s arts,” as a warrior and king. ars (ἀρτι)

113. Respice [re and obs. spicere.]—Ineffable pity shines in this word. Condas, [con, do] “may close.” See v. 102.

114. Sustinet, [sub, teneo] “He bears up under the evils which fate allots to extreme old age.” ars (ἀρτι)

115. Te discedente, “when you left” for Troy. Puella.—See note, v. 98. annus—ars

116. Protinus [pro, tenus.]—Ut = quamvis “even though.”

Considerable poetic art is manifested in the structure of the closing lines of this beautiful epistle. Commencing at v. 97, we have a distich containing the tres imbelles: three points of attraction which are to lure the truant Ulysses to his sea-girt home: his loving wife, his aged sire, his promising son. Holding up her boy, the pledge of their early love, in the next six lines, (vv. 99–104) Penelope makes a touching appeal to a father’s heart by an allusion to the dangers which beset him, and the filial offices he should perform for them in the closing scenes of life. “Laertes, Telemachus, and I,” occupy the next six lines, a distich to each (the true notion of Elegiac poetry) again with delicate touches portraying the urgent necessity for a speedy return. And again, in the three concluding distiches, the boy of tender years who should be receiving a father’s instruction, the aged father, only waiting his son’s return that he may close his eyes in death, and the wife, left in the bloom of youth, fearful lest her personal charms should have suffered by the long absence of her lord, all present a picture, as charming as it is natural, as full of home affection and conjugal love, as ever won back the admiration and esteem of vagrant mariner.

EPIST. XIII.

Laodamīa (Λαοδάμεια).—Daughter of Acastus, and wife of Protesilaus. When her husband was slain before Troy, she begged the gods to be allowed to converse with him for only three hours. The request was granted. Hermes led Protesilaus back to the upper world, and when Protesilaus died a second time, Laodamia died with him. A later tradition states that Laodamia made an image of her husband, to which she paid divine honors; but as her father Acastus interfered, and commanded her to burn the image, she herself leaped into the fire and expired.

Protesilao (Πρωτεσιλάω).—Protesilaus was the son of Iphiclus and Astyoche. His native place was Phylace, in Thesaly; hence he is called Phylacides. He sailed for Troy with forty ships, according to Homer, and brought with him many Thessalian warriors. He was the first of all the Greeks who was killed by the Trojans, being the first who landed on the Trojan shore. According to the common tradition, he was slain by Hector. Protesilaus is most celebrated in ancient story for the strong affection existing between him and his wife Laodamia. His tomb was shewn near Eleus, in the Thracian Chersonese, where a magnificent temple was erected to him.

1. Mittit, fr. mitto, "I make to go," "I send," causative form of meo, I go. The order of these first two involved lines is: Laodamia, amans Æmonis, mittit salutem viro Æmo- nio et optat ire, quo mittitur [salus]. Another interpretation makes ire = pervenire, and understands salutem before it; i.e., wishes the letter (salutem) to arrive at the place whither it is sent Not so good.

Optat [Gr. ὤπτω] governs ire.

Salutem [fr. salvus].—Salus, a wish for one's welfare, expressed vivâ voce or in writing; here, in writing, and hence salutem (pars pro toto) here = epistolam.

2. Æmōnīs, -īdis, adj. fem. = Thessala. Thessaly was called Æmonia, from Æmonia, one of the daughters of Deucalion, who gave her name to that district.

3. Aulide.—At a place of the third declension is put in the ablative. Aulis, a sea-port town of Boeotia, where the Greeks were detained by stress of weather, through the anger of Diana on account of a stag slain by the unconscious Agamemnon, who had to immolate his daughter Iphigenia to appease the offended deity. vis (abim vis & is)

Est fama, [fr. fari, as φάμα fr. φῆμι] "There is a rumour."

4. Hic—ventus, "Where was this wind?" i.e. which would have detained you at home with me. Ventus appears to be derived from the common root of venio, and veho, signifying "motion along with, or towards." Fugeres, said reproachfully; non enim fugit Protesilaus.

5. Freta [Eng. Frith.]—Fretum originally meant a sound or channel; afterwards used for the sea.

Distinguish frēta and frēta.

Vestris remis, "the oars of your crew." See note, Ep. 1, 47. Remis, [Gr. ῥέμμος] dative after obsistere.

6. Sævis.—Sævus means "roused to fierceness;" ferus, "naturally fierce." "That time was suitable for stormy billows." Utile, because it would have kept you here at home.

7. Mandata, [in manus do, I give in charge] "injunctions, i.e., to take care of yourself, &c.

9. Raptus [Gr. ἀρπάζω.] Hinc, i.e., from Phylace, in Thessaly.

Præceps [præ-caput, head-foremost] "in precipitate haste." Tua vela vocaret, "invited your sails," i.e., persuaded you to set off.

10. Nautæ, contracted form of navitæ, [navis, ναῦς] dat. com.

11. Aptus, from an obsolete verb, apo, [Gr. ἀπτω, to fit] "suited to," "favorable for."

12. Amplexus, "embrace," fr. amplector, am = ἀμφι (circum) plecti = πλέκεσθαι, to twine round a person.

13. Verba, digammated from root ἔρω, εἶρω, to speak. Imperfecta, [in, neg. per, facio.] Reliquit is preferred by some because potui follows, and some, also, read potuit sc. lingua.

14. Vale [Eng. well] is a noun here.

15. Incubuit "pressed upon," i.e., blew violently. Boreas [Βορέας] would be the favorable wind to convey him from Thessaly to Aulis. Abrepta [ab rapio.]

Vela, contracted from vehulum, from veho, like eo, venio, ventus, conveying idea of motion. Tetendit [τείνω.] This is a very vigorous line, and to one accustomed to boating would seem a beautiful example of onomatopœia, the sound agreeing finely with the sense.

16. Jam, [déjà, old Fr. ja.] "Already," denotes the swiftness of the action.

17. Juvabat, gov. me understood.

19. Ut—non poteram. Ut has force of quum. "When I was no longer able."

20. Vultus meos, "my longing gaze." Vultus, the countenance as to features and expression, frequently meaning "angry looks;" facies, the face.

meus (powerful strength)

21. Fugacia [Homer, φυγάκινά].
22. Pontus, [Gr. πόντος, Eng. pond] "the open sea."
23. Tenebris obortis, abl. abs. Tenebræ, "the darkness or dimness of a swoon." Obortis, fr. oborior [Gr. ὀρνυμι, ὄρω, Eng. arise.] castus (caudo)
24. Succiduo [sub, from under, cado.] Dicor, because in swooning, her senses left her; she can therefore only speak from what her friends told her. Genu, Gr. γόνυ, fr. common root gen or gne; Eng. knee. See note, Ep. 1, 71. lacer (εἰς κρυ)
25. Iphiclus, son of Phylacus, and father of Protesilaus. Grandævus [grande-ærum.] Acastus, father of Laodamia.
26. Refecit, "restored me." facto ire hexi hexi
27. Pium, not pious, but affectionate. pectivi pexum &
28. Miseræ, dat. after licuisse. pectum (πεκτεω)
29. Pariter, "as well."
31. Pectendos, "to be arranged," by my tire-woman.
32. Capillos, [caput] "tresses."
32. Aurata, [aurum, Fr. or, Ital. oro] "inwoven with gold."
33. Ut quas, "Like [the Bacchantes] whom."
- Pampinea*—hasta, "the thyrsus," or magic wand of Bacchus, generally a spear-staff, round which vine-leaves were entwined.
- Bicorniger*, [bis, cornua, gero] "the two-horned god." Bacchus was frequently represented with horns. Cookesley thinks Bacchus was so called because the horn was the emblem of power, Bacchus being fabled to be a great Oriental conqueror. I think Bacchus receives this epithet because wine infuses strength and vigour. Cf. Hor. Odes, III. 21, 18, "addit cornua pauperi." numius (ne mis ahin meta mition)
34. Furor, "phrensy."
35. Phylacēidēs, Gr. nom. pl. of Phylaceis-idis, fem. "Thessalian." Phylacē, [Φυλακή,] a city of Thessaly where Prote- silaua reigned; hence he is called Phylacides. Some read Phyllēides.

36. Indue. [Gr. ἔνδυνε.] Hence Eng. endue.

Laodamia, from λαός, δαμάω, like Protesilaus, from πρῶτος, λαός, both indicate an aristocratic or regnant class. Hyginus says Protesilaus was so called because he was the first of all the people to land. Sinus, i.e., vestem.

37. Scilicet, "I suppose, forsooth!" Murice, "purple;" properly, a shell-fish, from which a purple dye was extracted. Gerere vestes, "to wear clothes" Gerere bella, "to wage war."

38. Bella geret, antithetical to geram vestes.

Iliacis, "Trojan." Distinguish moenia and murus.

39. Comas pectar. An elegant græcism. Some, however, read pectam Galea, "helmet," usually of leather, whereas the cassis is of metal-plate; neither of them a very comfortable head-piece.

arma (αρμα)

40. Novas vestes, opposed to dura arma, and governed by ferat. The balance of antitheses in this and the preceding lines is very fine. Vir, as ille, in v. 39, refers to the man κατ' ἐξόχην; Protesilaus.

41. Qua possum, "as far as I can." Qua, sc. via. Others have quo, sc. squalore. Squalor, "neglect of personal appearance." (squalor σκελλω)

42. Tristis agam, "I will pass in mourning."

43. Dyspari Priamīde, "Ill-fated Paris, Priam's evil son!" Both Greek vocatives fr. Dysparis, idos. [cf Hom. Il. III. 39, Δύσπαρι, εἶδος ἄριστε] and Priamīdes, α, Gr. patronymic, from Πριαμίδης-ου. The common reading, Dux Pari Priamīde, seems very clumsy. The Greek Δύς in composition has the force of malum as well as infelix. Therefore, in my translation, I have, by an easy turn, added the implied malum to Priamide.

Damno, dat. incommodi. Formose = εἶδος ἄριστε, Hom.

44. Hos-tis, hos-pes.—A somewhat frigid paronomasia. Hos-pes is akin to hostis, primarily a stranger, = a stranger who is treated as a guest.

Iners, "cowardly."—Malus means "cowardly" as well as "evil." Paris was the guest of Menelaus just before he eloped with Helen.

45. Tenariæ—maritæ, "Helen, your Grecian wife." Tænārum (now Cape Matapan), a promontory of Laconia, and the southernmost point of Peloponessus. Tenariæ, adj. poet. for Græcæ. Faciem, see note, v. 20.

Culpasse, contr. for culpavisse, "had found fault with." Laodamia thus reasons: If Paris had not admired Helen, he would not have loved her, would not have carried her off; if she had not been captivated by his personal attractions (formosus, v. 43), she would not have eloped with him; there would have been no war, and my husband would have been at home with me.

46. Tuam, sc. faciem.

47. Pro raptō, "to recover your runaway wife."

Nimum, "excessively—much more than she is worth."

48. Multis flebilis, cf. Hor. Od. I. 24, 9. Take quam with eris, not with multis

49. Sinistrum, "inauspicious." Laodamia deprecates the wrath of the gods for having said multis flebilis, and hopes her fears may prove unfounded. The use of "omen sinistrum" here is very appropriate, coming from a Greek; for, in auspices and divinations, the Romans turned the face towards the south, and so had the eastern, or fortunate, side on their left; while the Greeks, turning to the north, had it on their right.

50. Det, "offer up." Reduci—Jovi, "To Jupiter who restored him in safety." It was customary for returning warriors to hang up their armour in the temples, and offer sacrifices for their safe return. Distinguish redūci [redux] and redūci.

51. Subit = in mentem venit, "comes into my mind."

52. More, abl. of manner. De more is frequently used. Nivis.—You will notice little difference in sound between nivis, gen. of nix, and νίφος, gen. of νίψ. Lacrymæ, akin to Gr. δάκρυα. mader ere in (mad/aw)

53. Ilion—Simoisque.—See note, Ep. I. v. 4.

Tenedos, an island off the coast of Troy. Xanthus, a river, and Ide a mountain of Troy.

55. Nec rapere ausurus—hospes erat, "nor was the stranger (Paris), likely to dare to run off," with Helen.

56. Noverat, fr. nosco; old form, gnosco, Eng. know. Consult note, Ep. I. 71.

57. Spectabilis, "an object of wonderment" to the frugal Spartan people. Auro, abl. of cause.

58. "A prince who carried about on his person the wealth of Phrygia."

59. Classe virisque, "army and navy." Potens, supply venerat. Per quæ, some read per quos, referring to viris. For the rules regulating the gender and number of adjectives which refer to several substantives, see your Lat. Gram.

60. "And (yet only) a very small part of (the military force of) his kingdom accompanies him." Quotacunque pars, i.e., quam exigua pars. Another reading is quota quemque.

61. His, i.e., by Paris's brilliant display and well-appointed retinue. Victam (esse). Consors—gemellis, "sister to the twins," Castor and Pollux.

Ledæa, "daughter of Leda." gemellus (gemin)

62. Suspikor.—See note, Ep. I. 74. Danais, dat. incom.—See note, Ep. I. 3.

Danais nocere, "to work the Greeks woe."

63. Hectora—nescio quem, "one Hector;" lit. "Hector, I know not who he may be." Paris had been boasting in Greece of Hector's martial prowess. This was all Laodamia knew about him, but she had fearful misgivings of some mishap befalling her husband by Hector's hands. Her worst fears were realized, for, as we have seen above, Protesilaus fell by the bloody hand (sanguinea manu) of Hector. Hectora, like Hectōrās, v. 68, Gr. acc. sing. and plural of Hector [Ἑκτώρ.] See note, Ep. I. 15.

64. Ferrea, "cruel."

65. Quisquis is est, si sum. Note the sigmatismus. Euripides is charged with being fond of concurrences of the letter s (sigma).

67. Vitaris, contr. for vitaveris.

69. Facito [ut] dicas, "see that you say." Some read ut as it does not affect the scansion.

Pugnare, [Gr. πύξ, Eng. "box."]

70. Parcere sibi. Laodamia intimates that if her husband perishes she will also die.

71. Si fas est, "If it is heaven's decree." Fas, "divine law," as opposed to jus, "human law." Argolico—milite, "Grecian soldiery." See note, Ep. I. 25.

72. Non ullum = nullum. Vulnus, old form, volnus. (Alcibiades)

73. Pugnet, etc. A similar sentiment to that of Jeannette in the French ballad, "To Jeannot:"

"All the world should be at peace,
And if kings must show their might,
Then let those who have the quarrels be,
The only men who fight."

74. The construction is : Ut rapiat Paridi (eam), quam Paris ante (rapuit) sibi. Verbs of taking away govern accusative and dative.

75. Irruat [in, ruo] supposes here, exposure to danger : "Let him rush on to the attack ;" don't you be venturesome.

Causā, etc., "And let him also conquer in the field of arms (him) whom he overcomes in the justness of his cause."

76. Mediis, Gr. μέσος, Eng. midst.

77. Dispar, "unlike" that of Menelaus, not Paris, as Cookesley has it ; for you have a wife at home, therefore do you only fight to live and return to the affectionate embrace of your faithful Laodamia. pareo (pareus akin παρρος)

79. Dardanidæ.—See note Ep. I. 4. By a felicitous turn of the diction, Laodamia apostrophizes the Trojans as if present.

80. Meus—sanguis, "my life-blood ;" because she was so wrapt up in him, that the continuation of her own life depended on his. I think this line plainly indicates the true reading of the last line of this Epistle to be "si tibi cura mei," not "sit tibi cura mei."

81. Fateor, [fr. Gr. φάω, φήμι] "now I confess," what before I dared not say for fear of using ill-omened speech.

Volui, [akin to βούλομαι] "I wished to call you back, and my mind was leading me" to recall you. Distinguish animus, anima, and mens.

82. Substitit, "stood still." Auspicii, derived from avis—spicere, here simply means "omen ;" lit., augury from birds.

83. Foribus, fr. foris, Gr. θύρα, Eng. door.

84. Pes, pedis, Gr. ποῦς, πόδος, "Your foot gave an ill omen by stumbling on the threshold," which among the ancients was considered unlucky. Offenso limine, abl. abs. ; lit., "the threshold having been struck by it."

86. Poor Laodamia tries to avert the consequence of this mishap by prayer.

87. Ne sis animosus, "lest you be too venturous."

88. Fac, &c, "see that all this fear of mine go to the winds;" i.e., prove unfounded. As in v. 69, supply ut after fac.

89. Nescio quem, "some one;" as events proved, Protesilaus himself.

Iniquo, [in, neg. and æquus] "partial."

90. Primus, the superlative of obs. pris = pro, comp. prior, sup. primus. So Greek πρὸς, πρότερος, πρότατος, contr. πρώτος; and in English, fore, former, foremost, or first.

Troada, Gr. acc. fem. fr. Troas, Troadis. Troas was the district in which Troy stood.

92. Di faciant ne, "The gods grant that you may not;" faciant ut would mean "grant that you may."

Strenuus.—Compare our word strain; "to exert oneself violently." Distinguish vēlis and vēlis. strenuus (στρηνός)

93. Mille, "a thousand," in round numbers. Homer says 1181 ships sailed against Troy. The number is commonly placed at 1200. Rates. Compare English word "raft," here "ships." Millesima, "the thousandth," i.e., the last.

94. Fatigatas, "wearied" by the oars of the others who had gone before. Ultima, "the last." Ultimus is the superlative of ulter, comp. ulterior. Compare Eng. comp. utter, super. uttermost, or utmost.

95. Novissimus, "the last," lit. "the newest." The newest thing is necessarily, in many respects, the latest out. So we speak of the "latest news." celerem (κελνός)

97. Venies, "when you shall return" home. Carina, lit., keel; by metonymy, (pars pro toto) vessel.

99. Imago, "ghost."

101. Excitior, [ex, quatio] "I am awakened." Simulacra, [similis] "the phantoms." Adoro, [ad, oro] "I pray to."

102. Thessalis—ara, "Thessalian altar."

simulacrum (similis)

103. Thura, fr. thus, thuris; Gr. θύος. Sparsa, fr. Spargo; root spar. Gr. σπείρω.

104. Flamma [Gr. φλέγμα, fr. φλέγω.] Mero—see note, Ep. 1, 32.

106. Distinguish paratīs and paratīs.

106–109. Three ablatives absolute occur in these lines.

Pelago, Gr. πέλαγος. This same sea now wears the name of “The Archipelago.”

Suam, because Neptune built Troy’s walls. See note Ep. 1, v. 67.

110. Ruitis, ruo, Eng. rush. Redite, redeo; fr. re and eo, with an epenthetic d. Domos, Eng. “homes.”

111. Vetantes.—An elegant reading is tonantes.

112. Subiti casus, gen. sing., not nom. pl. Translate: “This remarkable (ista) delay (of your sailing) is not (the result) of unforeseen chance (but the work) of the deity,” i.e., of Neptune.

113. Adultera.—Helen.

114. Inachiae = Argivæ, “Grecian;” from Inachus, an ancient king of the Argives.

115. Egō.—Ovid never has the last syllable of ego long except in this passage, which has therefore been considered corrupt, and has been altered in various ways. Revoco, “call to mind.” We use “recall” in exactly the same sense.

116. Blandaue, etc.—A line which recalls Byron’s beautiful description of the Ægean:

“There mildly dimpling Ocean’s cheek,” &c.

117. Claudetur epistola.—Similarly in English we say, “I must close my letter.”

118. Si tibi, etc., “If you care for me, take care of yourself.” A pretty ending to Laodamia’s tearful epistle. The other reading, “Sit tibi cura mei, sit tibi cura tui,” has not the same force.
